Upland waits to approve high-rise office building

By NANCY WALLACE
Staff Writer

The Upland City Council will wait until Feb. 1 to decide the fate of Mountain Avenue's second high-rise commercial office building.

The Planning Commission gave the green light last month to JBS Corp. of Claremont to build twin eight-story towers — Gateway Plaza — on about five acres at Mountain Avenue and Seventh Street.

But the council had too many reservations about the developer's plans to negotiate for surrounding property to offer its stamp of approval Monday night.

The outer edge of property at a corner gas station must be dedicated to the city for street widening and a right-turn lane from northbound Mountain Avenue onto Seventh Street will be necessary to handle the extra traffic generated by cars driving to the twin towers. But this property is not owned by JBS, and public relations director Julie Edwards could not convince the council that gas station owner Robert Miller would agree to dedicate some of his property to the city.

Council member Ina Petokas

expressed concern that if the council approved the project and agreed to condemn the needed portion of Miller's property, the city may enter a costly legal battle.

"Councils and cities can get very badly burned," City Attorney Donald Maroney told council members, warning that when a city condemns one group's property because of another group's development, a lawsuit against the city is usually successful and quite damaging.

Council members agreed that one month should be adequate time for JBS to negotiate with Miller for that strip of property. They also agreed that the extra weeks would allow surrounding businesses and residents time to prepare their arguments for or against the development.

One resident pledging her return was Cynthia Patterson. She warned that the twin towers will be in the path of many children walking to Citrus Elementary School, located about two blocks northeast.

Attendance boundaries extend west to Benson Avenue and the bus no longer takes these children to school, Patterson said.

The children begin school about 9 a.m. and will be walking along Seventh Street at the time when office workers will be arriving.

"All of that traffic dumping into work would conflict with all the children walking to school," she told the council. "I intend to rally my neighbors," she said, adding she will urge the Upland school board to take a position against this development.

A representative of Ole's hardware store submitted a written request shortly before city offices closed Monday that the council table action on the development until Ole's could be present to explain its position.

In other action, the council unanimously approved the city's Traffic Improvement Plan to be submitted to SANBAG. High priorities on the list included widening of Campus Avenue north of Foothill Boulevard; traffic signals at Second Avenue and Arrow Highway, 13th Street and Benson Avenue, and at both 16th and 19th Streets at Campus Avenue; and an extension of Central Avenue from Foothill Boulevard to 13th Street.

Seniors persuade planners to keep area residential

Senior citizens with homes surrounding San Antonio Community Hospital have persuaded the Upland Planning Commission to keep professional and commercial businesses out of their neighborhood — for good.

City staff members had proposed that zoning for the southwest block of F Street and Ninth Avenue, immediately west of the hospital, be changed from residential to professional, which would allow doctors to set up offices in what are now private homes.

Planning director Bill Young explained this was proposed not because the area was blighted, but because the zone change would have been in keeping with the city's general plan for that area.

The commissioners elected to change the general plan this week instead of that block's zoning. They agreed that the neighborhood, built in the late 1940s, should remain a residential community not only to provide a peaceful lifestyle for the seniors now living there, but for young families who will need affordable housing in coming years. Commissioners directed city staff to amend the general plan to that effect.

Residents of this block and the surrounding homes expressed fear that the houses would gradually be bought by physicians, who would open private practices there and add to an already crowded traffic situation. Several of the houses on the block are now owned by physicians, but are rented for residential use.

"I don't think anybody, including all of you, would like a doctor's office next to you," homeowner Dorothy Carey told the commissioners. She added that most of the residents in her neighborhood are retirees and would be unable to move if the area became unbearable because of excessive pedestrian and automobile traffic resulting from professional and commercial businesses moving next door.

"We don't want commercial-professional buildings there," Virginia Guagliardo, a resident there since 1949, repeated. "We don't want to be pushed out."

Young adults also protested the proposal. "We would like to live there a long time," Susan Powers said. She explained her new family will be growing up there, as they cannot afford to move for many years.

And homeowner Ron Caron explained that a zone change similar to the one proposed has resulted in major traffic overcrowding for an adjacent neighborhood.

Foothill Fire District Birth report has lost $250,000

By JIM MARXEN
Staff Writer

Nearly $250,000 in additional funding could have been allocated to the Foothill Fire Protection District had it been a subsidiary of Rancho Cucamonga, a county report shows.

Recommending that such a merger take place, the Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO) said the district has been losing money it generates because of its independent status.

Fire district directors, who have been split on the issue of becoming a subsidiary district, expressed both satisfaction and dismay with the report.

"I don't think it leaves any stone unturned," said William Alexander, a proponent of the merger. "I fully expect that the board, after really analyzing the report, will see we have a chance to show the community that we are interested in providing the best fire service."

But Steve Wheatley, who was not on the board when it requested the study, questioned the results.

"I don't know how much time they spent on this," he said, noting an error in the report concerning the filling of a board vacancy last year.

"That (the information) is totally in error and it makes me wonder how complete the study was."

John Lyons, who favored a study, said the results appear incomplete.

"I didn't think it asked all the questions. We wanted to know about four possibilities — that we remain the same, become a city department, a subsidiary district or go to a regional arrangement with the county."

Lyons called the report "inconclusive."

Dan Richards, a vocal opponent of the merger and the only board member at the time who voted against asking LAFCO for a study, was unavailable for comment.

The seven-page study outlines a number of advantages to the proposal, including reduction of overhead costs, additional augmentation (bailout) funds, greater flexibility in fund raising and centralization of local government.

A major aspect of the report — and one anticipated by those in the fire district — dealt with augmentation funds that are channeled from the state through the county.

Under that arrangement, the report said, money generated by the local district's property taxes are pooled and distributed by the county on an "as needed" basis.

In the current fiscal year, the district contributed $973,755 to the fund but received back only $731,236 — a difference of $242,519, according to the report.

In addition, the report said the district would save at least $12,300 a year in overhead costs.

In addition, a subsidiary district could rely on different methods of raising money.

"The city could be able to support fire protection services with portions of its sales and use tax revenues, in-lieu revenues, liquor tax revenues or any other general fund revenue source to augment any deteriorating fire district revenues," the report concluded.

Disadvantages to the proposal include loss of augmentation funds to the county and three conditions placed upon the application by the district's board of directors.

Those conditions were that all property taxes and augmentation funds be allocated to the subsidiary district, all wage and benefit agreements with employees remain the same and the district be renamed the Rancho Cucamonga Fire Protection District.

Regarding the conditions, the report said the county could do little.

"The city (as governing body of the district) could legally allocate all, none or part of the augmentation funds to district operations," the report said. "So this first 'condition' is more a request which cannot be legally guaranteed."

Wheatley said he is concerned about that aspect of the arrangement.

"That money will not necessarily be going toward fire protection," he said.

But Alexander said he does not believe the city will retain the money for other services.

Video games arcade approval postponed

By STEVE SCAUZILLO
Staff Writer

Whether or not a new video games arcade is just what Santa ordered for Montclair, Monday night's City Council action made certain that it would not be approved on Christmas Eve as planned.

After hearing evidence and recognizing a petition signed by 200 people opposed to the arcade and its location in the Vista Moreno Plaza, the council voted 3-1 to hear an appeal on Jan. 18 of last week's Planning Commission approval.

The hearing postpones the conditional use permit granted by the Planning Commission after two public hearings. The condition, with its 23 restrictions, was set to go into effect Thursday. The decision also places on hold a lease between Bruce Mulhearn and Rene Vildosol, president of Super Games Inc.

Both Vildosol and Mulhearn's representative, Lou Catalano, argued unsuccessfully to get the council to back the commission.

"The conditions (placed on the owner) just about take care of any problem that might arise," said Catalano, reminding the council that one of those conditions prohibits Vildosol from opening the arcade during school hours.

"I've never seen a more in-depth investigation on a business," explained Catalano, who said Vildosol's other arcades were checked out by police Capt. John Nelson and passed "with all A's."

However, the majority of the council wanted to hear the issue and felt it could not rest on the sole judgment of the appointed Planning Commission. Councilman George Klotz, however, disagreed and felt that nothing was wrong with the approval.

"I personally believe the Planning Commission has done an excellent job. If the Planning Commission said it would issue a permit on the 24th, they should," said Klotz, an former planning commissioner who cast the only dissenting vote. Mayor Harold Hayes was absent from the meeting.

The petition was brought to the council by Linda Kennedy, assistant manager of the Plaza Villa Apartments, 9200 Monte Vista Ave., who feels the new arcade would increase teen-age traffic and subsequent vandalism in the area.

Kennedy said she has the support of the Moreno Elementary School, the Pomona Valley Unitarian Society and the businesses already established in the shopping center, including the Charisma Spas. Mulhearn Realtors, also located within the center at Moreno and Monte Vista avenues, does not support the petition.

In another reversal, the council unanimously rejected a zone change approved in November by the Planning Commission regarding the Pines of Montclair Apartments, 9550 Fremont Ave., owned by Ronald Soderline and Associates.

The request for a change from single family residential to multiple family residential was also approved in a first reading by the same City Council on Dec. 7.

Nonetheless, the council changed its mind after pondering the possibility of the applicant's intent to convert the predominantly senior citizen housing into condominiums.

A similar zone change proposal was denied in 1978 because it was accompanied by a condominium conversion plan. At that time, many tenants complained that they would be forced to relocate because they could not afford to buy the conversions.

Mayor Pro-Tem Nelson Gentry called the applicant's proposal "a prelude to conversion" and added it's "what they wanted to do for three years."

The planning staff recommended the change because it would conform to the general plan. Also, a condo conversion would not be possible because the units do not meet the density requirements set by the city's new Planned Residential Development ordinance.

Presently, the apartments are spaced at 12 units to the acre; the condominiums must be no more than 9 units to the acre. Also, recreational, parking and setback space allotments are not in line.

"He'd have to tear down three out of every 12 and that no one would do," said Klotz.

Robert Clark, director of housing and development, admitted that early in the year the owners approached staff on how to convert the units to condominiums.

'Sharing Tree' bears gifts for others; club sponsors special tree for second year

A "Sharing Tree," purchased and decorated by North Hills Pathfinder Club members, again had its place in the church foyer during the Christmas season.

As before, church members and friends chose an ornament, decorated by the Pathfinders. The ornament, transferred to the home tree as a reminder of need, contained last name, age and sex of a youngster who needed a Christmas toy. Gifts were purchased, wrapped, and placed under the tree for delivery by Christmas Eve. The club members made the deliveries.

Names provided by the Salvation Army were of local youngsters who, for one or another reason, would not have a Merry Christmas without Pathfinder assistance.

Pathfinder leaders say that the club discovered last year that "It is more blessed to give than to receive," and voted unanimously to repeat the sharing tree, choosing youngsters from babes through teens, as recipients this year.

MSAC's first graduating class planning a reunion

It's been 36 years since the first students walked onto the Mt. San Antonio College campus for the first classes in 1946. And some of the original Mounties think it's about time for a reunion.

An ad hoc group of alums recently met to plan
an "Early Mounties Round-Up" for next spring. Hosting the brainstorming session was the first sophomore class
president Tony Peich, with the first student body president Jim Straley,
'49 student body president George Martin, and Roger Becker and Phil
Heathman, Class of '49.

Now they need help
from the first Mounties.
Who are you and where are you now?

Were you in one of the classes of 1946 to 1950? If you were, get in touch with the "Round-Up" trail boss Peich. He needs your name, address, class year, and those of any other Mounties you may know about, so that more details can be mailed to you. And the committee needs more members to help put the reunion together. It's set for May 22, 1982.

Cal Poly prof to head poets' group

Jack Fulbeck, a resident of Covina and professor of English at Cal Poly University, Pomona, has been elected president of the California State Poetry Society, succeeding Ward Fulcher of Bakersfield.

Fulbeck, who earned his doctorate in comparative literature at the University of Southern California with a dissertation on poetic elements of the plays of J.M. Synge and Federico Garcia Lorca, writes and teaches poetry. He is a frequent speaker on poetic topics, and his poems have won several first place awards in contests.

The California State Poetry Society (CSPS) is an organization of approximately 300 poets located mainly in the Los Angeles and San Francisco areas, but with members from other states and foreign countries as well. The group is California's representative body to the National Federation of State Poetry Societies Inc.

Under the editorship of James MacWhinney of Riverside, the CSPS publishes the "California Quarterly". It also conducts monthly contests, open to members and non-members alike, in which case prizes are awarded for winning poems. In addition, a prize of $300 is offered by CSPS in the annual National Association's 1981 contest.

The public is invited to enter this poetry competition, details of which are available from Salle Herres, contest chairman, 374 E. Cypress St., Covina, CA 91723. Inquiries must include a self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

Napoleon hard to put down

Napoleon escaped from the island of Elba in 1815, and within three weeks France had rallied to the former emperor. The Battle of Waterloo on June 18 dashed Napoleon's last hopes, and the British government banished him to the remote island of St. Helena, where he died in 1821 at the age of 52.
